Question: 1

When an owner agrees to pay contractors for all costs on a project plus an agreed-upon markup for overhead and profit, the contractor will submit a _____ bid.

- A. cost-plus
- B. fixed-price
- C. unit-price
- D. time and materials

Answer: A

Explanation:

A cost-plus bid is one in which the owner pays all costs and then adds an agreed-upon markup for the contractor's overhead and profit. This type of contract is typically reserved for contractors that have a history of working well with the owner. The owner trusts that the contractor will keep costs in line, and the contractor has less risk because the owner has agreed to cover all project costs.

Question: 10

When a construction loan is used to finance a project, who must typically provide approval for progress payments to the contractor?

- A. The architect and building inspector
- B. The architect and owner
- C. The owner and lender
- D. The lender and architect

Answer: C

Explanation:

The lending institution providing the financing will typically require one of its inspectors to check the construction work to make sure it is complete before authorizing payment. The lender's money is on the line, so it does not want to pay if the work has not been completed satisfactorily. Additionally, the lender wants the owner to be happy with the work as well, so it requires the owner to sign off and accept the work as complete.
